‘.....Fleetcraft helps make safer airports’

Driver training company ‘Fleetcraft’ has just completed a two-week intensive risk assessment and training course for members of Guernsey Airport Fire and Rescue Service, which feature Land Rover products on their specialist fleet.

Chief Fire Officer Mick Cateroche identified a need for some of his staff to be trained in risk management and assessment skills, for his team and to rectify problem areas. The airport authority turned to ‘Fleetcraft’ because many of their instructors are serving or retired police officers.

‘Our people clearly have the skills and knowledge needed for such a contract,’ said Chris Titchener, Fleetcraft’s Training Manager. ‘We are delighted to have been chosen for this contract and hope to expand on this success’.

As well as providing driver training for many mainland ‘blue chip’ fleets, including BBC, Dixons, and Arriva plc, the company provides exclusive specialist training to the British Ambulance Association – the private ambulance sector.

Ends.
